b. Future Outlook:

(i) Debt Market outlook:

The Urjit Patel Committee Report of January 2014 has been the guiding force behind Governor Rajan's monetary policy framework. RBI's monetary policy actions since then have been closely aligned with the evolution of headline CPI and RBI's assessment of inflationary expectations. Having achieved its January 2016 CPI target of 6% (actual at 5.69%), RBI's focus will now shift towards achieving further progress in its disinflationary path and meeting its January 2017 CPI target of 5%.

Further, liquidity neutral framework will imply that the Repo rate will no longer be as relevant as the policy rate; instead RBI will move towards term repo/ term reverse repos for targeting short term rates.

Money Market

Money market yields continued to ease sharply amid comfortable liquidity – CP segment witnessed heavy issuances in 2-3M segment with yields easing by 5-8 bps. The three months Commercial Paper yield closed at around 7.85 levels on 15th June 2016.

Liquidity will continue to remain in the comfortable zone and might come under pressure in September 2016 on account of advance tax payments.

Sovereign Bond Yields

On the sovereign bond segment, we see the 10-yr range between 7.40%-7.55% during the June-July period. The 10yr GOI-SDL spread is likely to move between 60-75bps depending on the issuance levels. RBI has already conducted INR 700bn of OMOs purchases in the first two months of FY2017 compared with INR 631bn in the whole of FY2016. Besides injecting long term liquidity, OMO purchases will also serve to support GOI prices.

On the corporate bond front, given the balance sheet issues evident in much of the banking sector, an increasing proportion of private sector financing requirements will also likely be financed through the domestic bond markets. The continued supply of bonds in the secondary market through FPI liquidation, the emerging demand-supply scenario suggests that GOI-corporate bond spreads are likely to widen going ahead.

Inflation Outlook

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) rose 5.76% in May, from a revised 5.47% in April, mainly because of an increase in food prices. Further, the Krishi Kalyan cess of 0.5% to build rural infrastructure in India, which kicked in from 1 June, 2016 on all taxable services, is expected to add to inflationary pressure, along with the recent hikes in petrol and diesel prices.

Going forward the monsoon will be a critical factor which will drive the inflation numbers. Food Inflation is a major contributor to CPI numbers and monsoon would play a vital role in easing that. The expectations of a normal monsoon supply management measures and the introduction of the electronic national agriculture market (e-NAM) trading portal, should moderate unanticipated flares of food inflation.

Expectations from RBI policy meet on August 09 2016

Our expectations from the RBI policy meet on August 09 2016, clearly rests on the evolving inflation at the time which will significantly be dependent on global crude prices, fructification of IMD's prediction of good monsoons. We believe that the monetary policy is likely to be increasingly focused on transmission of already implemented easing measures. Quantum and timing of OMO purchases likely to become a much more important variable in determining the directionality of market interest rates. We see a possibility 25bps rate cut going forward. However the key risks to the view are possible monsoon failure, disruptive impact of Fed policy normalization and any discontinuity in RBI leadership.

(ii) Equity Market outlook:

We reiterate our assessment that the outlook for financial markets is quite sanguine over the next 3-5 years made in our previous annual report. The broad market (Sensex) declined by ~10% in FY16 after the 18.5% rise in FY14 and ~25% rise in FY16, likely reflecting a pause in the general positive trend.

The judgment of healthy returns on a tax-adjusted basis from equity markets is based on a medium term view of Indian economy and our understanding of market cycles. Indian economy experienced one of the best periods of economic growth starting early 2000s—Indian economy grew by ~5X between FY00-12 in nominal terms. This phenomenal growth of the past decade led to cyclical pressures in terms of higher inflation, deterioration in external balances, stretched balance sheets both in the corporate and banking sector etc. and more importantly brought to the fore the structural changes required to be made by the Indian economy to grow for the next decade and beyond. India has made steady progress towards addressing these challenges since the past few years. The correction in international commodity prices provides additional headroom for the country to grow and correct its imbalances.

Government initiatives to put in place a transparent process for allocation of real resources, deregulation of diesel prices, commitment towards fiscal rectitude and enactment of the bankruptcy code are good efforts to correct the structural challenges facing the economy. Enhanced government spends on infrastructure and reduction in the number of stuck projects will eventually lead to better cash flows for companies.

All economic booms typically result in overleveraged balance sheets in non-financial and/or financial sectors. This period is then followed by de-leveraging in the non-financial sector and consolidation and write-offs in the financial sector. Indian economy is currently witnessing all these trends and we have been almost 5 years since this phenomenon set in. This process reached a cinematic end in FY16 with RBI carrying out an asset quality review (AQR) for banks and asking them to make higher provisioning for 'weaker' assets. This has improved the transparency of bank balance sheets, forced banks to make concerted efforts at resolving their NPLs. All these should be positive over a period of time. A silver lining for the overleveraged balance sheets has been the high inflation during the past few years, which has effectively reduced debt burden for companies (unlike the western economies) but this has come at the cost of savers.

RBI's tight monetary stance over the few years, where the broad money supply (M3) has grown at ~12% CAGR between 2011-16 against a 20-year average of ~17% CAGR, has played a role in the moderation of inflationary pressures and resulted in better real returns for savers. We expect the inflationary pressures to remain moderate by better policy (both fiscal and monetary) and softer commodity prices.

Equity market valuations are close to their historical valuations and corporate profitability remaining below the historical levels. An important factor favoring the investors is that risk averseness is quite high among corporate, banking sectors and investor community given the experience of the past 8 years (since the great financial crisis of 2008). This significantly reduces the probability of permanent loss of capital, though there could be heightened gyrations in stock markets (as witnessed in FY16). These factors are likely to help deliver healthy returns for investors over the medium term on a tax-adjusted basis. Investors are advised to use the corrections to buy into equities and create wealth for themselves over the medium term.

We at LIC Mutual Fund Asset Management Ltd have strengthened equity fund management team over the past 3.5 years and introduced well-accepted practices of Research, Fund Management and Risk Management. We remain committed to maintaining high standards of analytical rigor and investment discipline in managing our funds and delivering competitive returns for our investors.
